CASE NAME: Kara Lynn McMurray v. Lt. Richard John Tallant et al

① Concerning the damages we might award, what frame or reference would help us determine with they are "neither inadequate nor excessive" ?

② For each of the counts is there a codified minimum or maximum compensatory or nominal damage range that we can refer to in developing our damage assessment?

③ Can you give us any examples or historical data on reasonable amounts for emotional damage? Is there information about the plaintiff's or the defendant's monetary situation/state that should factor into the decision or should be provided?

Question (3) You have to rely on all the evidence that you have and the instructions that the Court has given you in the case. Use your best judgment and common sense.

Question (2) There are no codified minimum or maximum limits as to damages. But as to nominal damages, you should refer to Instruction Number 56.

Question (1) You might consider any emotional damages the Plaintiff has sustained, when they began, how long they lasted, and their intensity over time. Please refer to Instruction Number 54. In any case, use your best judgment and common sense.
